

Driving Directions: From the town of Greybull in the Bighorn Basin, take Highway 14 east. After crossing the national forest boundary east of the little town of Shell, go about 5 miles to the Shell Falls tourist information center right along the highway. This is the downstream end of the instream flow segment. Fishing access is technically challenging here and ill-advised, but the view is spectacular. The best fishing access is found about 4 more miles east of here. Turn off on Forest Service Road 17 that goes 1.5 miles to the Shell Creek ranger station and Shell Creek campground. To get here from the east side of the Bighorns, go north from Sheridan on Interstate 25 and turn off onto Highway 14 at the Dayton exit. Upon reaching Burgess Junction in about 27 miles, stay left on Highway 14 and go another 15 miles to this same Forest Service road turnoff. There are several two-track roads leading down to the stream between the campground and the highway. You can navigate some of them in a passenger car but others are more suitable for a high clearance truck or invite a short hike.

Legend

-  WGFD Aquatic Regions
-  Access Roads
-  Other Roads
-  Perennial Stream
-  Instream Flow Filing
-  5th Level HUCs
-  Shell Creek Watershed