

Driving Directions: Go about 11 miles west of Kaycee on Highway 190 to Barnum (now just an abandoned building at the end of the pavement). Turn south here on a good gravel road and go about 3 miles on the Bar C Rd. Just after you cross the river, you'll see a sign directing you west up the slope of the mountain. Though 2-wheel drive sedans have been known to make it up and back from here, you'll find this portion of the trip much easier in a fairly high clearance 4-wheel drive vehicle especially if it rains. This part of the road will parallel the canyon rim above the river for its entire length. There are several trailheads that lead to the stream. Expect at least a half hour hike down to the stream and up to an hour to climb out.
